

BECOME A MENTEE

You may be interested in becoming a Mentee as a young professional or because of a transition into the economic development sector from a different profession or career. Mentees can also be experienced economic developers who are looking for advice on specific topics.

In order to participate in this program, Mentees must be a member of SEDA. We will do our best to get you a mentor that can address your issues.

A Mentee is expected to be an active partner who receives advice, coaching, assistance and feedback from a more experienced professional, resulting in enhanced capacity in your career.

The scope of the mentorship relationship will be decided between you and your mentor.

You may choose to establish a casual 'on demand' framework or alternatively, establish a structure in order to tackle a specific project or challenge. If choosing the latter, we recommend establishing a set of steps that you both agree will lead to achieving the mentorship goal. Then determine how you will communicate and how often and schedule the engagements.
